This hope we have
as an anchor of the soul...
